What do farmers want?

22.03.24
A legal guarantee for an MSP that already exists. Its extension to all farm produce. They do not want the government to procure all crops. Nor are they secessionists. It is time to bust the propaganda

COVER STORY

On the road to MSP

10/ The farmers' protest 2.0 for a legally backed MSP for all agricultural produce has the potential to give the opposition a second wind just before the Lok Sabha election, which partly explains the Centre's furious moves to keep the protesting farmers outside New Delhi and simultaneously discredit them.

ON THE COVER:

Painter and sculptor Bharti Kher's Six Women is a series of life-sized, sitting female sculptures, cast from real women in her New Delhi studio. Kher sees the body as a literal and metaphorical site for the construction of ideas around gender, mythology and narrative. In the mid-2000s, she began to create a series of strangely beautiful, but quietly grotesque, hybrid figurative sculptures of women that fused human and animal body parts. Kher described them as "mythical urban goddesses, creatures who came out of the construction of the idea of femininity or the idea of womanhood... she is the goddess, the housewife, the mother, the whore, the mistress, the lover, the sister... everything". The vulnerability of the women stems only in part from their nakedness; Kher's sitters were sex workers, paid by the artist to sit for her, in a self-conscious transaction of money and bodily experience.
